McDonnell to lay off 4,500

By Laura J. Hopper
Staff writer

ST. LOUIS — About 4,500 employees of McDonnell Douglas Corp. in the area will lose their jobs by the end of the year, as part of a $700 million cost-cutting program, the corporation's chairman announced at a news conference Monday.

Between 14,000 and 17,000 jobs will be eliminated from McDonnell nationwide, said John F. McDonnell, chairman and chief executive officer. Employees began receiving notices of the layoffs Monday.

McDonnell Douglas employs 40,500 people in the metropolitan area. "We deeply regret the pain and suffering that this is going to cause," McDonnell said. "We will provide assistance to help these people find new jobs, but we can't guarantee jobs where none exist."

At the conference, McDonnell said he did not have a breakdown of the layoffs by department, but confirmed rumors that the corporation's white-collar work force would be hit the hardest.

"We don't have specific numbers, but overall, I would say it will be primarily office-type workers," he said.

Generally, the St. Louis layoffs are believed to include the following:

• A reduction of about 3,000 jobs at the McDonnell Aircraft Co.

• A decrease of about 500 jobs at the McDonnell Douglas Missile Systems Company's St. Louis facilities.

• A reduction of about 800 jobs at McDonnell Douglas Electronic Systems Co.

Systems Integration and corporate support

'We hope this action will make a significant difference and would hope we don't have to do it again.'

— John F. McDonnell

facilities, including McDonnell's corporate headquarters.

Nationwide, the layoffs will represent 11 percent of McDonnell's total work force, including about 8,000 layoffs at the Douglas Aircraft Co. in Long Beach, Calif.

McDonnell said most workers in St. Louis and Long Beach will receive 60 days notice before leaving their jobs, although the method of termination may vary from office to office. Workers in the 25 other states where McDonnell has operations likely will receive two weeks notice, he said.

Officials at McDonnell, the nation's largest defense contractor, said the companywide cutbacks are being prompted by proposed cuts in U.S. defense spending — due to the changing climate of political relations with the Soviet Union and Eastern Europe — and cost problems on several of the company's fixed-price military development projects.

In addition, investment costs are growing for the company's new, MD-11 jumbo jet program.

"We must demonstrate that we are taking aggressive action to improve our financial performance," McDonnell said in a letter sent Monday to all of the company's employees.

"We must have a sound financial picture so that we can generate and obtain the large amounts of cash needed to fund the MD-11 program prior to certification and delivery."

But McDonnell also pointed the finger at himself and the rest of the company's management, saying, "In retrospect, it is clear that we made some mistakes in the course of our reorganizations."

The inefficient restructuring, combined with the avoidance of layoffs in past years, put the company in an inescapable dilemma this year, McDonnell said.

"As we changed the structure, we accumulated staffs well beyond the minimum that were required," McDonnell said.

McDonnell officials had discussed cost-cutting measures in the past, McDonnell said, but put off action in hopes of finding alternatives to a mass layoff program.

"It took us too long to recognize that we had too many people on the payroll," he said. "In the letter to employees, 'In fact, we did everything but face the issue of layoffs.'"

"We cut costs, we trimmed expenses, we started selling off some of our businesses and commercial real estate, and we kept hoping for increased profitability."

Several employees wrote to McDonnell executives, suggesting a pay cut as an alternative.

Shoney's to begin construction here

GRANITE CITY — After years in the making, construction of a new Shoney's on Nameoki Road will begin next week and the restaurant should open for business in October, according to an official with Shively Construction, the firm building the restaurant.

Joe Shively, owner of Shively Construction in Belleville, picked up building permits from Building Inspector John Jakich on Friday. By Monday morning, land surveyors were already working on the lot at 3712 Nameoki Road.

Jakich said the estimated $320,018 cost of the project includes all building, wiring, plumbing and other construction costs.

The City Council approved the site in March 1987 but Shoney's delayed scheduled construction starts several times.

"We've had many calls from people interested in having a sit-down restaurant, which we have a shortage of in Granite City," Jakich said.

Refineries deny fault

ALTON — A release of sulfurized hydrocarbons from an Amoco Petroleum Additives Co. storage tank in Wood River may have been the reason for area residents turning up their noses Friday night.

Amoco probably was responsible for the odor smelled by nearby residents Friday night, a company official said, but he denied it was responsible for the wide-ranging pungent, obnoxious odor reported between 9 and 10 p.m. Friday throughout southern Madison County and northern St. Clair County.

"We did have a release around seven o'clock of a short duration," Amoco Vice President of Manufacturing Woody Gar (See OODR, Page 9A)

Pastor: Alaska return to small town life

By Sam Hananel
Staff writer

MADISON — The Rev. John Zabinko and his wife, Margaret, are returning to the small town life of Kodiak, Alaska, on Monday.

Zabinko recently became pastor of the Holy Resurrection Russian Orthodox Church in Kodiak. He had worked there before returning to the contiguous area of the United States three years ago.

He and his wife have spent the last few days visiting with his wife's family in Madison.

They will embark on the long drive to Seattle, Wash., and from there they will board a plane to Anchorage, Alaska. Then, a smaller plane will take them to the island of Kodiak.

Zabinko met his future wife in Kodiak and they were married in 1981.

His spirit of adventure initially guided him to Alaska in 1978, shortly after he graduated from St. Tikhon's Seminary near Scranton, Pa.

"You had to learn to adapt," Zabinko said. Since Kodiak is an island accessible only by boat or plane, residents learn to deal with the sense of isolation imposed by nature.

Zabinko said there are times when residents are "locked in" by weeks of harsh winter storms. During such times, mail does not arrive and provisions can run short.

Although necessities like food and clothing usually are readily available on the island, he said, most people shop by catalog or travel to Anchorage by a 45-minute air trip.

Zabinko spent nine years working for St. Herman's Seminary in Kodiak. After that service, he was transferred to the Protection of the Virgin Mary Church in Gary, Ind., where he served as pastor.

But he and his wife just couldn't get accustomed to urban life after spending so much time in Kodiak.

"Life is too fast-paced down here and very difficult for us to adjust to the summers," Zabinko said. "It's a slower pace of life (in Kodiak). I find the work in the church more challenging there."

Several weeks ago, Zabinko received word that there was an opening for a pastor at the Russian Orthodox Church in Kodiak.

the site of the oldest Russian community in America. The Zabinkos' fondness for the sense of community in Kodiak, a close-knit fishing village of 9,000 citizens, made the offer too good to pass up.

One difference which makes life more appealing to them in Kodiak is the "unique closeness" of the church members. "You just don't find that anymore in the lower 48 states," Zabinko said. "And this has taken its toll on membership in the church."

The Zabinkos are now eager to return to Alaska. Having spent the last three years in Gary, they have a renewed outlook toward life in Kodiak. "We feel like we're going home, but we also feel like we're going into a new situation," he said, referring to his new position.

Ideally, the Zabinkos said, they would like to retire in Kodiak.

Zabinko and his wife have an eight-year-old son.

Volunteers helping cancer patients cope

GRANITE CITY — Beginning this month at St. Elizabeth Medical Center, approximately 10 CanSurmount volunteer-visitors will offer their support to recently-diagnosed cancer patients.

CanSurmount is a program sponsored by the American Cancer Society. It matches medically and emotionally stable cancer patients with recently-diagnosed cancer patients, for a one-to-one, limited-term visitation program.

Pat Callahan, coordinator of St. Elizabeth Medical Center's cancer program and CanSurmount director/coordinator, said the program will make every attempt to match individuals by type of cancer, sex, age and other factors that might contribute to mutual understanding and better communication between visitor and patient. Callahan will be acting as a liaison between the medical center, the American Cancer Society and CanSurmount Committee.

She also will be responsible for assigning volunteers for patient visits, receiving referrals and coordinating all record-keeping that results from the visits.

"I am really glad we are able to start this program at the medical center. It will allow us to reach out to more people in a personal way. We plan to have a group of volunteers ready to make the visits," Callahan said.

CanSurmount will allow associates (SEMC employees) from different departments to work together.

For instance, the SEMC Social Work Department and local pastor the Rev. Doyle Ankrum will act as facilitators for the program.

The facilitators will help CanSurmount volunteer-visitors cope with their own personal struggles while handling communication with the patients.

Medical advisors William Popovic, M.D., and Guillermo Rodriguez, M.D., medical oncologists/hematologists, will offer patient referrals and guide the program.

Three SEMC registered nurses also will act as trainers of the CanSurmount program here: Diane Bridell, Intravenous Therapy/Chemotherapy; Julie Cournois, Oncology; and Mary Thoutvenot, IV Therapy/Oncology.

The CanSurmount team also will oversee continuing education for the volunteers and will be responsible for scheduling and planning the training of new volunteers.

According to CanSurmount volunteer Kathy Dauer, R.N., clinical coordinator in Dr. Dolores Cantrell's office at SEMC, the program is needed in the Granite City area.

"I know I could have used someone to talk with about my cancer diagnosis two years ago — someone with the similar type cancer and who had been through the trauma and the ups and downs. Now I can do that for others. I'm just thrilled it's getting started at SEMC," Dauer said.

For more information on CanSurmount, call 798-3510.

Jack Bruce seeks release from prison

By Terry Hillig
Staff writer

EDWARDSVILLE — The convicted murderer of a Granite City couple could go free if a judge agrees the man received inadequate legal representation.

Jack G. Bruce, 46, formerly of the Granite City area, is serving two concurrent life prison terms for the murders of Carl Hoffman, 49, and his wife, Susan Hoffman, 27, on April 30, 1986.

Bruce, who was convicted and sentenced in 1987, maintains he is innocent. In a post-conviction motion, Bruce contended the charges should be dismissed and he should be released because his trial was delayed more than 120 days because of inadequate representation by attorney James Gomic of Belleville.

Associate Judge J. Lawrence Keshner said he hoped to rule within a month. Bruce recently filed a civil lawsuit against Gomic alleging inadequate representation.

Bruce testified July 10 in a hearing before Keshner that Gomic agreed to delay his trial without his consent.

Bruce said he had told Gomic repeatedly he did not want his trial delayed and fired Gomic after learning he had agreed to a continuance. Under pressure from family members, Bruce said, he agreed to let Gomic handle his appeal on the condition that Gomic include the ineffective-representation argument. Gomic did not, Bruce alleged.

Gomic said July 12 that he had raised all the appropriate issues before the trial and during the appeal. "He's hollering about the 120-day rule. We raised the issue at the time. We brought it to the court's attention," Gomic said.

In addition, Bruce claimed Gomic saw him only once or twice before the trial, and that the lawyer failed to appear for two felony docket calls while Bruce was awaiting trial.

Bruce's current attorney, John Gitchoff, said he always considered Gomic "a competent and able attorney," but that his conduct in defending Bruce was "below a reasonable standard of representation."

Gitchoff said Bruce should be released because of Gomic's conduct regarding the speedy trial issue. No defense attorney can waive a client's right to a speedy trial over his objection, Gitchoff said.

Madison County Assistant State's Attorney Robert Trone said it was too late for Bruce to raise the issue of inadequate counsel.

The Hoffmans were found dead in their living room. They had been shot and stabbed repeatedly.

In addition to the life terms, Bruce is serving 30 years for attempted murder and 30 years for home invasion. The attempted murder charge was based on an allegation that Bruce turned on a gas stove and lit a candle in an unsuccessful effort to kill Susan Hoffman's 4-year-old daughter.

3 arrested at 19th Hole after disturbance

Dan Edward Caughron, 32, of the 2400 block of Iowa Street was booked on three counts of battery after an incident at 5:55 p.m. July 13 at a tavern.

Police were en route to a disturbance call involving a man and woman at the 19th Hole Tavern, 2401 Washington Ave., when they were advised the woman involved was at 23rd Street and Washington.

Cheryl Anne Keck, 29, of the 2200 block of Lee Avenue and Sandra Kay Monson, 29, of the same address told officers the suspect had started calling them names and an argument ensued.

Monson alleged Caughron grabbed her by the neck and, when Keck tried to pull the man away from her, Caughron punched Keck in the nose. Her nose was bleeding and appeared to be broken, police said.

Kevin Ray, 39, of the 2200 block of Lee Avenue told police he tried to break up the fight in the tavern and alleged Caughron hit him in the back of the head. Ray, the two women and another man then left the tavern.

All returned with the officers to the 19th Hole where a barmaid, Marsha Young, said she didn't know where the suspect had gone. Officers then heard a man talking behind a closed door in the tavern; Caughron was found hiding inside and was arrested.

Caughron posted $306 bail and was released, pending a hearing. After Young alleged Keck and Monson had yelled and screamed profanity in the bar, both women were charged with disorderly conduct. Keck and Monson were released after each posted $52 bail.

Drivers alerted to fatigue

During the summer millions of Americans pack their vehicles and take a vacation. Illinois drivers are reminded by Secretary of State Jim Edgar that road fatigue can ruin a trip if proper precautions are not taken.

Fatigue, usually sets in after driving two to four hours. Edgar offers the following suggestions to fight road fatigue.

Stop to exercise or rest every two hours or so. When driving with another person, change drivers every other stop.

Take breaks only at a rest area or other safe roadside place. Never stop on the shoulder of the road to rest.

Do not drive more than 10 hours straight. The Federal Highway Administration believes individuals are three to four times more likely to fall asleep after 14 hours of driving than after 10 hours.

Extra federal judges opposed

By Jason Moody
Staff writer

WASHINGTON — A bill to create 77 new federal judge seats, including one in East St. Louis or Alton, has come under fire for being based on political considerations rather than judicial need.

Senate Judiciary Committee approval was voted July 12. Sen. Joseph Biden, D-Dele., who sponsored the legislation, reacted angrily to charges that his selection process for new federal judicial posts reflected political patronage within the Senate Judiciary Committee, which he chairs.

Although nobody has linked the proposed seat in the Southern District of Illinois to political favoritism, the dispute could delay passage of the legislation designed to reduce court backlogs nationwide by creating new judgeships and reforming the judicial system.

Biden's legislation assigns judges to locations where there is no demonstrated need and, quite frankly, it points to political favoritism," said Rep. Lamar Smith, a Texas Republican who has introduced his own bill.

"We all agree on the need for new judgeships but the seats should be chosen based on objective data rather than patronage," Smith said.

Similar charges have been leveled by the U.S. Judicial Conference, an independent policymaking branch of the U.S. courts, charged with developing its own plan for judicial reform.

The Judicial Conference plan asks for 66 new judges with a geographical distribution that differs from the Biden plan.

"I want to tell you I am mildly offended by the way your officials have characterized me, my colleagues and the Senate," Biden lashed out to members of the Judicial Conference at a hearing.

"The party in control, the party in power, the party that will determine whether or not there is a bill, that party did not ask for new judges in their districts beyond what you recommended," said Biden, referring to Democrats on the committee.

However, some members of the Judicial Conference have said Biden gave seats to Republican senators in an effort to build support for some of the more unpopular areas of the bill.

Biden countered that Congress's desire to target new judges to areas with high increases in drug-related cases accounts for the differences between his bill and the Judicial Conference proposal.

House Minority Leader Robert Michel, a Peoria Republican, has introduced his own ideas to address the problem of case overload in Illinois, a state that he says has some of the busiest courts in the nation.

Under the Michel bill, the U.S. 7th Circuit that includes Illinois, Indiana and Wisconsin would expand in Illinois by creating one permanent and one temporary judgeship in the northern district and two temporary judgeships in each of the central and southern districts.

If a new judge comes to the Southern District he will either be located at the federal courthouse in Alton or the federal courthouse at East St. Louis. Judge William Beatty of Granite City has been transferred from Alton to East St. Louis, leaving no federal judge in Alton.

The number of judicial seats is determined by Congress but judges are appointed by the President and approved by the Senate.

The chairman of the House Judiciary Committee, Rep. Jack Brooks, D-Texas, opposes creating a large number of new seats, since it would give a Republican president the opportunity to nominate all the new judges, according to Capitol Hill sources.

Nemerov steps down as laureate

WASHINGTON — Washington University English professor Howard Nemerov of University City is stepping down as poet laureate of the United States after two years in the post.

The Pulitzer Prize-winning poet gave a final reading of his work at the Library of Congress recently and expects to make a final appearance as poet laureate this summer in connection with a literature program, a library official said.

The Library of Congress, which oversees the poet laureate program, commended Nemerov for introducing readings in the library's literary series, and holding poetry seminars for high schoolers.

Disability Awareness Day planned for fair

The Madison County Board has proclaimed July 25 as Madison County Disability Awareness Day.

The board "encourages all citizens of Madison County to promote full participation in society by all its members, to be sensitive to the needs of all community members, and to recognize that people with disabilities are people with capabilities."

The proclamation designates Disability Awareness Day at the Madison County Fair with activities hosted by Knights of Columbus Highland Council 1580 and friends.

Children and adults with disabilities will again have a day designed just for them. Highland will be "the place to be" for rides, music and entertainment.

The day has been increasing in impact each year, with greater participation from Madison, St. Clair, Bond and Clinton counties, a spokesman said.

Summer visits keep residents busy

Martin and Donna Wills and their children, Philip and Ali, hosted Donna's brother and sister-in-law, Danny and Wanda Borror, and sons, Travis and Avery, at the end of June.

The Borrors were here from Dalton, Ga., to attend the wedding of Dennis Borror, brother of Danny and Donna. Dennis Borror was married to the former Vickie Burris of Granite City.

The families also attended worship services at Faith Chapel General Baptist Church on Sunday, July 1, and Donna Wills was baptized during the baptismal services.

Lucey Colbert and her sister, Maxine Duniphan, have returned from southeast Missouri, where they attended the funeral of their aunt, Irene Carver of McGee, Mo.

They also visited their mother, Lillian Carver at Puxico. At Mrs. Carver's home, they also visited with three of their cousins, Lester Wilfong of Edwardsville, Coy Wilfong of Nebo, Ill. and Ben Wilfong of Lowndes, Mo.

John and Nell Hicks have returned from "Dover, Tenn., where they spent a month at their vacation home. Their son and daughter-in-law, Jimmy and Sue Hicks and children, Brianna and Jay, joined them for a week-end visit.

Noel, Sue, Brianna and Jay also traveled to Opryland U.S.A. in Nashville, Tenn., during the weekend. They toured the area and heard several musical groups perform, including the Cumberlin Boys Gospel Singers.

Orville and Linda Blevins of Oklahoma City were guests at the home of Bill and Opal Davis during the first week of July. The Blevins were returning their two grandchildren to their home in Rock Island after they'd visited with the couple in Oklahoma City.

The Blevins called at the Davis home en route to Rock Island and then returned to the Davis home via Springfield, where they did some sight seeing.

Accompanying the Blevins back to Oklahoma were the Davis' grandchildren, Tad and Ashley, who were being returned to their parents, Bill and Teri

Davis of Oklahoma City.

Former area residents Bill and Ruth Wiegand of Pella, Iowa, were guests last week at the home of her mother, Emily Jones.

The Wiegands were joined here by their daughter, Kathy Wiegand of Fenton, Mo. They also visited other relatives and friends in the area before continuing their travels to Logansport, Ind., to visit their son, Leroy Wiegand.

Members of the Camera Explorers Club, which has members from Mitchell, Hartford and East Alton, met at the Hartford

Public Library on July 2. The group meets on the first Monday of each month at 7 p.m.

The July photo subject was "Cats." Winning entries in color were submitted by Earl Naylor, Bob Bethel, Maxine Duniphan and John White.

Winning entries in slides were submitted by Bev Zagar and Naylor. No black and white were submitted this month.

Landscapes will be the camera subject for the Aug. 5 meeting.

Maxine Duniphan covers the Mitchell area for the Press-Record Journal. She can be contacted at 931-2714.

AT IMPACT

Disability is not inability

Rich Griffith exiting his lift equipped van at the IMPACT office.

Rich Griffith knows about setbacks. In 1954 he got polio. After rehabilitation he was able to get around with no crutches, return to work in 1956, and lead the hectic life of a workaholic. He overdid it. By 1980, at age 48, he was unable to work due to fatigue, weakness, and pain. Not until about 1984 did they find a label for his condition, late effects of polio. He and numerous others had overworked their polio affected muscles. In 1986 he came to IMPACT.

"IMPACT helped me put my life together. I needed a wheelchair, and they helped me realize it was OK to be in a wheelchair." IMPACT offered options as to where to buy a wheelchair and a lift equipped van. He also graduated with honors from our GED program. Now he coordinates our post-polio support group. Next meeting is Saturday, July 28th. Rich Griffith and IMPACT are on a roll, you can be too. Call if we can be of help.

•McDonnell

native to layoffs, McDonnell said. But such a move "would not be a long-term solution," he said.

"We must have the best people, and we must be able to pay competitive salary rates to keep them," he said.

While layoffs are the primary component of the cost-cutting program, other measures include:

- Reduced capital budgets.
- Cuts in "support activities," such as travel, consultants and advertising.
- Reduced overtime and greatly restricted overtime payments for salaried exempt employees.
- A 50-percent reduction in company contributions to the salaried savings plans.

McDonnell said this plan could be fully restored by the end of 1991 or earlier, if the financial picture improves.

But if economic conditions don't improve for the company, McDonnell could not rule out more layoffs in the future.

"At our current business level, this action will be satisfactory," he said. "In the future, we may be forced to re-evaluate the situation."

For now, McDonnell said, "We hope this action will make a significant difference and would hope we don't have to do it again."

Employees that lose their jobs will receive several forms of assistance, including job fairs, resumes and counseling, McDonnell said. He said the company also will recommend to other area employers the large number of skilled, technical workers now available.

•Odor

mon, said Saturday. "We advised local police and fire departments of it."

But Garmon added, "Those odor complaints started long before and long after we started our release. I don't know if Amoco is partially, fully or out of responsibility. Some of those, I don't know how it could have been us."

Garmon said the release was "absolutely not" a health hazard.

The Amoco release came on the heels of a small release Friday morning at Shell Oil Co. in Roxana of mercaptan, the chemical that gives natural gas its smell. Pungent odors from that release were reported by plant employees and in South Roxana beginning about 6 a.m., a Shell spokesman said.

That release also did not pose health dangers to the public, Shell environmental superintendent Gene Peters said.

When residents began calling Friday night about odors, Shell employees checked the entire plant operation, but found no release, Peters said. "We concluded that whatever this was had its source north and west of our complex," Peters said. "We are absolutely convinced it was an unfortunate coincidence."

Hartford Assistant Fire Chief John Grigg said his department started getting calls about 6 p.m. Friday. "The whole town was calling," Grigg said.

"We got a pretty good whiff." Some residents complained of feeling nauseated and having headaches, and one resident reported vomiting because of the smell, but no one was treated for illness, Grigg said.

Many residents thought they had natural gas leaks, Grigg said. "A lot of people wanted their basements checked."

The Amoco release lasted about 15 to 20 minutes after a storage tank of lubricative additives overheated. The release contained sulfur and other alcohols found in the additives, but Garmon declined to name the specific chemical, citing proprietary confidentiality.

How will Illinois women vote in the 1990 race for U.S. Senate?

By Jason Moody
Staff writer

WASHINGTON — Both major candidates in the Illinois U.S. Senate race are trying to take advantage of the gender gap — an often-discussed but little documented theory that women can decide U.S. elections.

Although neither Republican challenger U.S. Rep. Lynn Martin nor Democratic incumbent Paul Simon have polling data on the role women are likely to play in the Nov. 6 election, both are actively trying to appeal to women in the state.

"There has never been a woman elected to any Illinois state-wide constitutional office so I do talk about it," Martin said Thursday at a "women in politics" forum with former vice presidential nominee Geraldine Ferraro.

Martin points out that two women serve in the Senate and 28 in the House. She says electing more women would help them serve as a role model and would give a more balanced perspective on legislative issues.

"Little girls see it (women in office) and say, 'I want to be in politics,'" Martin said.

Simon has talked of his record on child care, abortion, family leave and the Equal Rights Amendment. He also touts his endorsements and high rankings from women's groups, including the Illinois chapter of the National Organization of Women and the National Abortion Rights Action League.

Trying to prove party affiliation is a stronger bond than gender, Simon last week held a fund raiser where 14 female Democratic lawmakers joined to endorse his candidacy.

"We all respect and like his opponent but we know that Paul represents our issues better," U.S. Rep. Lindy Boggs, D-La., said at the fund event.

But Martin said her position on women's issues should not be judged on only a few key votes. "Women have fought stereotypes all of their lives. To suddenly say, 'By the way, you are all going to be liberal Democrats or conservative Republicans or any other permutation ... We don't say all men will vote the same way,'" she said.

"Since women have joined the work force they also are talking about other issues that used to be men's issues ... tax policy matters, defense matters, too."

State election records show 52 percent of the registered voters in Illinois are women. But there is little other information on voting behavior in the state or how female candidates are viewed.

Although Simon leads the way in endorsements from state and national women's organizations, Martin said, she possesses other advantages that will pay off come election time.

"The things that 10 or 20 years ago people would say might not qualify you — experiences as a teacher, a mother — people say, 'Hey, that's an asset now,'" Martin said.

Quick cooking partners make great kitchen companions

Summer dining calls for easy meals featuring minimal preparation but maximum flavor appeal for busy people who want to get out of the kitchen and into summer fun.

Warm weather meals often mean a simpler style of cooking. One dish that combines several meal components, rather than serving several courses, is satisfying and not overly filling. The secret is pairing easy-to-prepare packaged and convenience foods with quick-cooking fresh ingredients.

For a special summer meal, easy on preparation but long on flavor, call on quick-cooking pork tenderloin to star in Wild Dijon Pork. The pork is sautéed in Dijon mustard and butter while the savory wild rice and broccoli simmer to perfection in just five minutes. Stir in cherry tomatoes for a dash of color.

Walnut and Cheese Wild Rice, another meal quick to prepare, begins with fast-cooking long grain and wild rice cooked with fresh carrots and mushrooms. Cubes of mozzarella cheese and toasted walnuts stirred in just before serving complete the healthful and delicious main dish. Serve with a crisp spinach salad and refreshing melon wedges for a rewarding meal in minutes.

Wild Dijon pork

- 1½ lb. pork tenderloin, cut in 6 equal pieces, pounded ½ inch thick
- 4 tbsp. butter or margarine
- 2 tbsp. Dijon mustard
- ½ tsp. paprika
- 2 cups water
- 1 pkg. (6½ oz.) fast-cooking long grain and wild rice
- 1 cup broccoli flowerets
- 6 cherry tomatoes, quartered
- 2 tbsp. chopped green onion

Melt 2 tablespoons butter in 10-inch skillet over medium heat. Stir in mustard and paprika. Add pork. Cook about 5 minutes per side or until pork is cooked through.

Combine water, contents of rice and seasoning packets, and remaining 2 tablespoons butter in medium saucepan. Bring to vigorous boil. Add broccoli. Simmer, covered tightly, until all water is absorbed, about 5 minutes. Stir in tomatoes.

Walnut and cheese wild rice

- 1½ cups water
- 1 pkg. (6½ oz.) fast-cooking long grain and wild rice
- 2 tbsp. butter or margarine
- 1 cup sliced fresh mushrooms
- 2 medium carrots, cut in ¼ inch thick diagonal pieces
- ½ lb. mozzarella cheese, cut in ½ inch cubes
- 1 cup toasted walnut pieces
- 2 tbsp. chopped green onion

Combine water, contents of rice and seasoning packets, butter, mushrooms and carrots in 10-inch skillet. Bring to vigorous boil. Simmer about 5 minutes, cover tightly, until all water is absorbed. Stir in cheese.

Sprinkle walnuts and green onion over rice. Serve immediately.

Makes 6 servings.

Pork tenderloin is a quick and easy companion to a savory blend of rice and fresh broccoli and cherry tomatoes.

Summer heat on picnic lunch may cause sickness, end fun

By Janice Denham
Food editor

Joseph Mele wants people to have a good time when they picnic this summer. He wants them to eat food that is safe, as well as delicious.

He and Richard Johnson, co-owners of Melsom, teach people who are responsible for caterers in industry and schools how to handle foods efficiently with good health in mind.

"There are a lot of unsafe practices carried on in kitchens throughout the country," he says. "A lot of people get a one-day or two-hour sickness from food. I had a touch of this or a touch of that," they say. That would qualify as being a food-borne illness.

He says home kitchens are a perfect breeding ground for contamination between utensils and food.

"It's great to go through the process of using a dishwasher, but then you store your silverware in drawers that haven't been cleaned for a year."

He recommends cleaning drawers at least twice a year and storing silverware in closed containers. When drying dishes, air-drying is more efficient than towel-drying, but the dishwasher with very hot water outshines both processes.

Mele says, "Every refrigerator should have a thermometer. Make sure, especially when it is a kitchen where a refrigerator is not new equipment, that the temperature in a central location is no more than 45°."

Cutting boards, particularly those made of wood, are a major source of contamination in a kitchen.

"The cleaning process is to wash, rinse, and sanitize everything chemically with a bleach solution. Butcher blocks should be treated the same way. After all, you can't have them upside-down to be cleaned."

Mele recognizes the biggest problem in keeping a kitchen clean and safe is a person's own habits — and long-time, unsafe habits are hard to break.

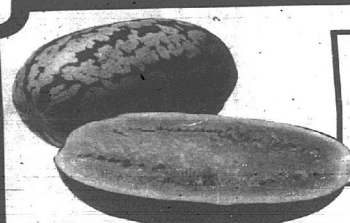

Picnic foods are easy to mishandle. Foods always should be kept cold and not left out so warmer temperatures cause bacteria to grow.

"Always use disposable plastic tableware," he advises. "Keep it closed in the package until it is used, then use it once and throw it away. When you use the kitchen silverware, crustation develops on a spoon. In wet weather it doesn't take long to contaminate. Then it goes back in the potato salad and — boom — it is all contaminated."

He gives a gold star to some brands of coolers now on the market that keep ice frozen all day. He recommends carrying refreezable ice packs, rather than blocks or cubes of ice that can melt and carry bacteria from food to food.

Barbecue chefs never tire of outdoor dining

By Janice Denham
Food editor

Cave drawings don't give away ancient man's secret barbecue sauce, but a desire to cook food on an outside grill must be contained in a human gene. The effect can be counted in the summer hours spent in the backyard squirting food with a water bottle and turning it with tongs.

"Barbecue Bob" Friedman, barbecue pro in Washington, D.C., and picnic expert for Eckrich Lite products, says mid-America wears its love of barbecuing on its apron. An outdoor dining survey conducted by Eckrich Lite found Missourians like hamburgers (45 percent) on their picnic menu most often, pack chicken (30 percent), hot dogs (17 percent) and pork (nine percent).

Friedman likes to use a covered grill and even covers an exhaust hole if there is one to allow more aroma in the meat. Food still needs tending and the flame needs to be doused regularly.

"But it speeds up cooking 20 percent and retains a smokier taste," he says. "Where you are getting the flavor is from the smoke getting up inside the meat. There are all kinds of things you can do to enhance the flavor."

One way is to start with barbecue sauce. Combine a traditional one from the store with brown sugar for a "sweetish" flavor or vinegar for tang.

Hickory and mesquite wood chips are other favorites, as well as pecan and walnut shells. Friedman says they should be wet about 30 minutes before using them so they do not catch on fire and burn up the meat. An easy effort is to start the fire and wet the chips at the same time.

The biggest problem people have in their backyard is overcooking or undercooking meat," he says. "This is caused by two things. First, you need to allow 20 minutes to get the fire hot."

The fire is ready for use if the cook can keep his hand over the fire 3 to 6 seconds before it gets too hot to keep it there. If it takes less than three seconds for a hand to be ready to move away, the fire needs to be knocked apart and cooled with water. If it takes more than 10 seconds, it needs encouragement. Steaks and burgers should be done in about 20 minutes, chicken in 45 minutes and franks in 5 to 10 or maybe 15 minutes.

The second reason he gives for poorly barbecued food is "people don't want to babysit the food. Everything has fat in it. The fat drips into the fire and the meat is blackened. The cook comes back after wandering off and the food looks done, but it isn't on the inside because it is seared on the outside. You need to stand there with a spray bottle to keep down the fire."

To help a picnic run smoothly, know when the meal should be served, then work a schedule backwards to know what should be done when. And, Friedman says, know who is going to do what.

He adds, "I have some bugaboos, if you'll pardon the pun, about handling insects on a picnic, too. Try to avoid cologne and perfumes. Avoid sunny spots, which is where bees like to be, and moist spots, to avoid mosquitoes. The location should be shaded and breezy. Spray the ground with insect repellent."

then wash your hands so it doesn't get on your food."

Use plenty of ice, too. He likes the reusable ice packs for a cooler and ice balls for drinks to avoid melting water. Food should be held at no more than 45°. Vacuum-packed meats should be kept at the same temperature, but they are easier to handle because they are not exposed to air.

Eckrich offers a free recipe booklet with sizzling barbecue and picnic ideas. To receive it, call toll-free 1-800-648-5415.

Friedman says, "If you do a lot of grilling over the summer, a burger is a burger is a burger." Here are some hot ideas for serving delicious grilled foods in adventuresome ways on a checked tablecloth:

•Marinate food before grilling. An easy marinade for chicken is Italian salad dressing. Friedman uses a lot of onions, green peppers and garlic so it sticks to the meat.

•Ribs cooked completely on a grill are a Friedman favorite but they require patience. He says St. Louisans like thick ribs, so be prepared to spend 6 to 8 hours near the grill so they get well done. To tend ribs, he plans a day doing outside chores around the house near the grill.

To hasten the process, ribs can be parboiled 30 to 45 minutes on a stove top. He recommends adding sauce only during the last 30 to 45 minutes to avoid burning the food.

•Heat sausages on a grill. They do not need marinating. Combine with green peppers and onions as shish kabobs. Or split the sausage, then pour barbecue sauce on it while cooking skin-side down. Another addition is cheese. Or use a light, sweet glaze on Kielbasa.

•Cook hearty-fleshed fish skin-side down without turning it only 5 to 6 minutes until it starts to flake with a fork. A simple garlic butter is the best accompaniment.

•An easy barbecue sauce is a combination of ketchup, onions, green peppers, mustard and a splash of Jack Daniels.

Ice cream pie cools nicely with rich flavor of almonds

Debra Donze, 207 Nottingham Court, Fairview Heights, Ill., is the winner of this week's dinner certificates from The Pasta House Co. for Amaretto Pie.

She invented her own ice cream with the flavor of almond liqueur after she tasted it at a restaurant, then she went on to use it in a rich and outstanding pie. She uses a prepared butter crumb, rather than a graham cracker crust, for its complementary value. If desired, a homemade crust can be made with crushed vanilla wafers.

Entries during July may become winners in August, so it is time to send in recipes that use fresh fruit. Any type of dish — from appetizer to grilled meat, from salad to dessert — is acceptable, as long as it uses delicious summer fruit. One recipe per household may be sent to: Fruity Good Recipe Contest, 1215 Fern Ridge Parkway, Suite 108, St. Louis, Mo. 63141. It should be postmarked by July 31.

All winners during August will be chosen from these entries, so an entry may be considered a possible winner any of the five weeks that month by sending in a single recipe.

Type or print the recipe legibly on one side of the paper. Include name, address and telephone number on the entry. Name the Journal you receive. Be sure to double-check the recipe as it is written for both amounts and directions, including any variations that make this dish special.

If there is a history to the recipe, it will be considered part of the entry. It will be part of the basis for selecting winners, along with taste and eye appeal. Originality will be considered, although the recipe need not be original. If possible, name the source of the recipe.

Winners are notified by mail. Duplicate entries will be considered on the basis of earlier entry or best compliance with the rules. Contest winners may enter again six months after their prize-winning publication date.

Brazilian salad

- 2 cups (8 oz.) ditalini or elbow spaghetti, uncooked
- 1 clove garlic, crushed
- 1 can (16 oz.) peeled tomatoes, drained, cut up
- 1 cup ripe pitted olives, sliced
- 2 tbsp. olive oil
- 2 tbsp. chopped fresh parsley
- 1 tsp. salt
- 1 tsp. pepper

Cook spaghetti according to package directions. Rinse with cold water to cool quickly. Drain well. Cool.

Crush garlic in bowl. Add cooked spaghetti, tomatoes, olives, olive oil, parsley, salt and pepper. Toss lightly. Chill.

Makes 4 to 6 servings.
Peeling tomatoes: When fresh tomatoes become abundant, make the most of their ripe flavor in Brazilian Salad. To peel a tomato, skewer it on a fork and dip into boiling water, then plunge tomato in cold water. The skin will slip off easily. If tomato is very ripe, rub it with blunt side of knife to loosen the skin, then peel it.

- 1/2 cup sliced almonds, toasted
- 1/2 cup flour
- 1/2 cup sugar
- 1 tsp. pumpkin pie spice
- 1/2 cup butter or margarine, melted
- 1 tsp. vanilla
- 1/2 cup heavy cream
- 1 cup apricot jam
- 1 pt. strawberries, sliced
- 1 nectarine, sliced
- 1 kiwifruit, peeled, sliced

Combine oats, almonds, flour, sugar and pumpkin pie spice in mixing bowl. Mix in butter, and vanilla. Press dough together with hands to form ball.

Roll or pat dough into 9 1/2-inch circle on ungreased baking sheet. Bake at 375° for 15 minutes until lightly browned. Cool.

Whip cream with 2 tablespoons jam until stiff peaks form. Spread evenly over cookie base. Arrange sliced fruit over cream. Melt remaining 2 tablespoons jam. Brush over fruit.

Cool before serving.

Makes 8 servings, 380 calories each.

Percy favors Palestinian state in Israeli-occupied territories

By Jason Moody
Staff writer

WASHINGTON — Returning from a three-week tour of the Middle East on July 11, former Republican U.S. Sen. Charles Percy of Illinois called for a Palestinian state in the Israeli-occupied territories.

He said U.S. aid to countries in the region should be linked to human-rights improvements. Percy, former chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, criticized the United States for "missing a historic opportunity for peace" in the troubled region.

He said U.S. politicians are being unduly influenced by pro-Israel political action committees (PACs).

"The moderate leaders of the Arab world, for the first time are saying 'no violence — we recognize Israel's right to exist,'" Percy said at a press conference here. "The rest of the world is moving. We'd better start moving in the Middle East now."

In a trip sponsored by the FAX World Foundation, Percy traveled with a group of 45 Americans and two Canadians and met a cross-section of leaders, including Israeli Prime Minister Shimon Peres, Chairman Yasser Arafat of the Palestinian Liberation Organization, President Hosni Mubarak of Egypt and President Elias Hrawi of Lebanon.

Although Percy stopped short of referring to his own 1984 race, in which he was unseated by Democrat Paul Simon, he said large contributions of pro-Israel PACs in U.S. elections prevented many politicians from pressing for a more evenhanded policy in the Middle East.

"Real debate on U.S. Mideast policy has been frozen for almost two decades as uncompromising support for Israel in this capital has become the norm of good politics," Percy said.

U.S. Middle East policy became a source of controversy in the 1984 Senate race, with Simon attacking Percy for stands he took as chairman of the Foreign Relations Committee.

Percy in turn criticized Simon for, he contended, relying too heavily on pro-Israel PACs to fund his election.

Percy, who had served for 18 years, lost the race with 48 percent of the vote compared to Simon's 50 percent.

At the press conference, Percy said the United States should force Israel to the same standards as other countries.

"Israel should be advised that our aid to that country may well be linked to human rights practices in the occupied territories, just as the human rights practices factor is considered in aid decisions to all other countries," he said.

Unlike the Simon-Percy campaign, the Middle East has not become a big issue so far in Simon's race against U.S. Rep. Lynn Martin, R-Loves Park. Last November in his weekly news column, Simon said he supported continued aid to Israel at its current level and defended the country's human rights record.

"The abuses of human rights in most of the Arab countries are much greater than in Israel," the column said. "We read and hear more about human rights abuses in Israel because it is a free country."

GC native works on film sequel

Darren Davis, a former Granite City resident, has graduated from The Art Center of Tucson, Ariz.

Davis graduated in 1983 from Granite City High School North. He now resides in Tucson with his wife, Mary, and 3-year-old son, Tristen.

He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Darrell (Marcia) Davis of Granite City.

While in college, Darren had the opportunity to be involved in the development of a major movie, his parents said. During his studies in Tucson, Davis was asked to provide various artistic impressions for the makers of the film, "Young Guns II."

Some of the drawings Davis created were used in the creation of various props for the film. Among the people he worked with during the production of the movie were Lou Diamond Phillips, Emilio Estevez and Keifer Sutherland.

Davis related to family members that it was a great honor to be involved with these talented actors and the various art layouts in the film.

Due to Davis' artistic talents

DARREN DAVIS visiting with actor Lou Diamond Phillips on the set of "Young Guns II."

and the assistance he provided during the production of "Young Guns II," Davis has been since contacted by Universal Studios for more drawings and a possible chance to further delve into the art/movie profession, his parents report.

Local TV threw resources at Herzog, success varied

Whitey Herzog's resignation as manager of the Baseball Cardinals was the trigger for an enormous burst of activity in the television newsrooms around town July 6. Each of the news departments responded with special coverage, with varying degrees of success.

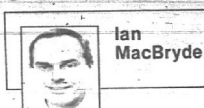

KSDK-TV (Channel 5) was the first to break the news at approximately 1 p.m. Friday (July 6), about two hours before the news conference at which Herzog discussed his reasons for the resignation. All three network affiliates and independent KPLR-TV (Channel 11) carried the news conference live, although KMOV-TV (Channel 4) went back to regular programming after approximately 10 minutes.

Channel 11, Channel 5 and KTVI-TV (Channel 2) stayed with the special coverage until its conclusion. Channel 5's Nielsen numbers zoomed from the 6-rating, 18 share, which it had for Wimbledon tennis, the program which it interrupted, to an 11 rating, 29 share as the news conference opened. That apparently is evidence that when there is breaking news, Channel 5 is the station to which people turn. That, of course, is a role which the Channel 5 promotion people have boasted of for years.) The ratings for the other channels did not seem to change appreciably.

By the way, the rating is the percentage of the sets in the market tuned to a station, while the share is the percentage of the sets in use that are tuned to a particular program.

The early evening newscasts were dominated by the resignation. Channel 11, which carries many of the team's road games, devoted about half of its 8:30 p.m. newscast to the resignation and then switched to game coverage at 9 p.m.

Ian MacBryde

By the 10 p.m. newscasts, the other newsrooms had their best feet forward. Each newscast led with the resignation, each gave us some retrospective pictures of the triumphs of the 1980s, and each promised us more later. Channel 2 and Channel 5 offered full-blown special reports at the end of the newscast, and Channel 4 settled for "expanded" coverage—which turned out to mean that the sports segment of the newscast ran well beyond its normal time limit.

There were some indications that Channel 5 moved more quickly than its competition in covering the story. For instance, reporter Rich Isom was in New Athens, Ill., (Herzog's home town) while the news conference announcing the resignation still was going on in St. Louis, Calif. The Channel 2 and 4 reports from New Athens were done that night.

All three stations scrambled reporters to San Diego, where Channel 2's Dana James scored something of a coup by getting reaction not only from Cardinals players, but also from former Cardinals Garry Templeton and Jack Clark.

Channel 5's Malcolm Briggs talked with current Cardinals, but Channel 4's Gary Apple ended up with only a live interview with a newspaper columnist, standing outside Jack Murphy Stadium in San Diego, while the Cardinals played inside.

Channel 4's bright moments included an interview with elder statesman Bing Devine who talked about the difficulties of managing in the free-agent era.

Channel 5's visual catalog of Cardinals errors seemed to say a whole lot about why Herzog had given up his job, and the after-newscast, special report included a piece on interim manager Red Schoendienst.

Channel 2's pluses included a piece by Donn Johnson which touched on Herzog's reclamation job on Darrel Porter, and even included virtually the only negative words on Herzog apparently ever uttered in St. Louis. They came from St. Louis Prosecuting Attorney George Peach, who said it is good Herzog is leaving because "He's too big for his own britches."

Whether you agree or not, it was refreshing to hear someone willing to go against the tide.

Channel 3 anchor Don Marsh also had the courage to ask the question which was surely on a lot of minds: "Are we making too much of this?" Replied guest commentator Kevin Horrigan, "Whitey means a lot to this town. But, (to Marsh) as you said earlier, 'What are we going to do when he dies?'"

Was it really too much? Well, maybe. But we all got a chance to see the various news departments fling themselves into action for the first time in a while. And, after all, one definition of news might be that it's whatever substantially affects and interests large numbers of people. Certainly, by that definition, any material change in the fortunes of the Cardinals is big news in St. Louis.

The stations showed a willingness to commit large numbers of people and lots of expensive resources to coverage of a story of major interest. And for the most part they were good at it.

There was, if you'll forgive me, a little too much deification of Herzog. He is, after all, not without some flaws. But in today's culture of folk-hero-worship, I guess it's not unexpected to see some of our allegedly objective news people fawning over a baseball manager. Unseemly, but not unexpected.
